

I am a fairly new resident to New Jersey and as soon as I got my phone hooked up I started receiving numerous phone calls from telemarketers. The volume of calls just kept escalating day after day to the point that I counted up to 15 calls in one day. I stopped listening to my answering machine and just deleting all my calls to avoid listening to unsolicited nonsense...that is until I signed up for the "Do Not Call" list. It's the BEST! And now this program is in jeopardy of being overturned...! Who is doing the thinking over there? What are we to do then...? Maybe the entire State of New Jersey should have their phone calls forwarded to the FCC for screening and handling of these telemarketers, because I definately don't want to deal with them! Maybe then you can see how ludicrous and how frustrating these calls are!
